CONTRIBUTIONS TO IRISH LEXICOGRAPHY.

The following collection of words is the outcome of about twelve years desultory reading of Middle- and early Modern-Irish books and manuscripts. It would be much fuller, if from the outset I had made my excerpts in a systematic and methodical manner. As it is, the vocabulary of no single book or manuscript is fully represented.

As a general rule, words the form and meaning of which have been established by Windisch in his Wörterbuch, or by Atkinson in the Glossary to his Passions and Homilies have been omitted. On the other hand, I have included words from the smaller Glossaries with which Stokes, Atkinson, Hogan, and myself have been in the habit of accompanying the editions of separate texts. In such cases, however, a simple reference to these glossaries has generally been deemed sufficient.

I have to thank Mr. Whitley Stokes for kindly allowing me to incorporate his collections of words from the Annals, and Prof. John Strachan for letting me compare my excerpts from LU. with his own.
